Proponents' Testimony: None

Opponents' Testimony:

Chris Manos, Executive Director, State Bar of Montana, rose in opposition to HB 94. Mr. Manos stated those term limit restrictions are against the Montana State Constitution. He commented that in Montana, as in all states, there are three different branches of the government with checks and balances built into each of them. This bill would restrict one of those branches.

Questions from Committee Members and Responses:

REPS. EVERETT, DRISCOLL, HARRIS, KOOPMAN, MCGILLVRAY, NOONAN, CLARK, STOKER, HARRIS, and WINDHAM questioned REP. SINRUD and Mr. Manos extensively. Among the questions posed to him and Mr. Manos was how many judges had been impeached or charged with a violation. REP. SINRUD replied that he did not know. When asked if there has ever been corruption or political influence authenticated within the Supreme Court; the answer was again that he did not have any knowledge of this. This information would be in the Judicial Standards Review division. REP. SINRUD did say that he would get the information for the committee. The committee was interested in whether there had ever been a precedent for term limits for judges and would term limits increase costs for elections. REP. SINRUD responded that in his opinion the costs would decrease and further stated that he did not know if there is a precedent for term limits.

REP. SINRUD was also queried about whether these bills were being proposed as retaliation for some recent rulings the Montana Supreme Court had recently made and that the court is viewed as liberal and activist by conservatives. REP. SINRUD replied; "Absolutely not."

The questioning continued with committee members asking Mr. Manos and the representative about whether the Montana constitution gives the Supreme Court justices more protection than legislators; i.e., term limits. Mr. Manos replied that the legislature determined term limits, not the people. Another question posed was how much experience as judges do the justices have prior to being on the Montana Supreme Court. Mr. Manos replied that he would supply the members of the committee with that specific information.

Questions from Committee Members and Responses:

REPS. STOKER, BECKER, and GUTSCHE inquired of REP. ANDERSEN to clarify whether daycare providers are required to record drugs that are given; how in emergency situations medication may be given; how parents can give permission and how to deal with pre-existing conditions requiring medication to be given. REP. Andersen knew of criteria in California, however was not sure of the specifics in Montana. (see below for response by Ms. Siebenaler)

REP. GUTSCHE notified committee members that a person in the audience would be able to supply committee members with answers to their questions.

{Tape: 2; Side: A; Approx. Time Counter: 210 - 261}

Becky Fleming-Siebenaler, State of Montana, Department of Health and Human Services, licensing, informed the committee that there is a requirement that day care providers must have written authorization from parents before they can administer medications. She explained to the committee many more criteria that must be met by providers and what the state is doing to toughen current requirements through education and training.

REPS. DRISCOLL, WARD, HARRIS, NOENNIG, KOOPMAN, GUTSCHE, RICE questioned REP. ANDERSEN, Mr. Heggem and Ms. Siebenaler extensively regarding what legal charges the daycare provider in this case would face.

Mr. Heggem answered the daycare provider has been charged with one count of negligent homicide, three counts of child endangerment and one count of destroying evidence. The daycare provider will face these charges in June, 2005.

The committee members continued with the possibility of revamping the requirements daycare providers would have to adhere to; i.e., more substantial penalties for any infraction. The members were also interested in what other states have been doing regarding this issue. Some of these cases involved prescribed medications; what about over-the-counter medications was another question the committee posed to the sponsor and licenser. Presently there is no specific statute that deal with the over-the-counter medications.

Mr. Heggem explained to committee members the specifics of his son's incident with the daycare provider, the investigation and the upcoming legal case that will occur in the spring.

The entire House Judiciary Committee expressed their condolences to the Heggem family and wished them well.
